

PRESS RELEASE

3 November 2004

...promoting a new kind of dialogue

The Transatlantic Institute sponsored Europe's largest non-partisan Election Night Party in London's Soho, with over 800 attendees.

The Transatlantic Institute sponsored Election Night Party, held in London's Soho, drew more than 800 attendees. The largest and only non-partisan Election Night event to be held in Europe, attracts media from around the globe, with both CBS and NHK (Japan) coverage. Ziba Norman, TI's research director, told CBS, "We have been amazed by the response to this event, and could have filled the venue three times over."

"There is a very strong interest in US politics and the presidential election, and this certainly shows a renewed interest in the political process amongst young people, who composed the largest group at the event."

The Transatlantic Institute is a non-partisan educational organisation based in London. Our mission is to promote informed debate on areas of common concern to both America and Europe.
